

What a great day May 16 in new England was. Got the lawn cut today and the lawn mower does not shut off. The lawn mower will take a trip to a small engine shop. We will get it tuned up and running for the season and get little issue fixed. Had a business development seminar tonight for the amway business. A couple that had built the business to pretty good level. The message that I got out of it today is "Do that small thing daily to build the business and the big thing will happen". That is why I am writing a couple of paragraphs every day. I remember getting certified and carrying the book everywhere and not looking at it. I remember finally settling down with it one day and 2 months later. I had a new certification. But it started by carrying something with me every day.

Just like forcing myself to write every day. Some days it gets done early and comes easy and some not so much. But every day you make sure that you do something. It sounds ridiculous but the key to anything is go take action and do it every day. If you are under employed you should apply for a job every job. With that I am going to sign off for the day. Enjoy life and remember, "keep it light, go fast, have fun and above all relax" and remember do not look in your rear view mirror. There is nothing to be gained by looking at the rear view mirror.
